Christianity On the Jobsite by Adam Faughn

What is Christianity? For some, it is simply one piece of life. We can take it out, and it doesn't leave any effect on other aspects of our life. We can put it on when needed, or we can leave it at the church building when we desire to do something else.

However, that's not the Biblical picture of Christianity. As Jesus enumerated the two "greatest" commands, the first contained "all" four times. If we paraphrase it, Jesus taught that we should love God with all we have.

Paul continued the thought in Romans 12, where he told the readers to offer their bodies "as living sacrifices" (v. 1). To follow that directive, all we do must have God at the center.

Christianity, then, should be more like the center of an old wagon wheel. Every time the center of that wheel turns, everything turns with it. It holds every part of our life together. It provides stability to the whole.

As Paul continues his letter to Titus, he reminds the young preacher that some aren't the "boss" of their situation. Slaves, though often treated poorly (or extremely poorly in some cases), were still to follow Christ and show His light in their working lives.

In our modern society, we are growing ever more lazy and disillusioned with the concept of work. We go to work only to earn a paycheck, never thinking that our place of employment could be a mission field and a place to show the love of Christ.

Chances are, you work with someone who needs to become a Christian. Have you ever thought that how you work and your attitudes on the jobsite could influence that person towards (or away from) Christ?

Sure, bad days will come in any job, but Christians should continually be diligent in work, and should continue to show a shining light on the jobsite. Let's think about that this morning.

CORRECTION RE: OUR GOSPEL MEETING:

I learned on Thursday morning that bro. Phil Sanders had made a mistake when he entered the date of our Gospel Meeting May 2—5, 2010 He put down 2011 instead of 2010. Those type mistakes are easy to make, so we assured him it was not "the end of the world". We hope that he may come in Oct. or Nov.

CONGRATULATIONS!!

to Les & Ashley (Russell) Neville on the arrival of their son born Friday, Feb. 26 at the Medical Center in Bowling Green — 5 lb 2 oz, and was 15 1/2 in long. Congratulations to those in the congregation here: great-grandmother, Hilda Russell and grandparents, Ken & Carolyn Russell.

SINKING TREASURES

By David A. Sargent

Rose O'Neal Greenhow (1817-1864) was born in Port Tobacco, Maryland. Orphaned as a child, Greenhow was invited to live with her aunt in Washington, D.C. as a teenager. While living in the nation's capital, she was introduced to important figures in the Washington area. One of those figures was John C. Calhoun, a man of pro Southern politics, who apparently convinced Rose to also be of pro Southern interests during the time of the American Civil War.

Greenhow's sympathy for the Confederate cause grew after the death of her husband, Dr. Robert Greenhow. Her loyalty to the Confederacy was noted by those with similar sympathies in Washington, and she was soon recruited as a spy...

In July of 1861, Greenhow passed secret messages to Confederate General P.G.T. Beauregard containing critical information resulting in the Union rout at the First Battle of Bull Run. Suspected of espionage and imprisoned in August 1861, she continued gathering and forwarding information vital to Confederate operations. News of her activities brought publicity and tremendous popularity among Southern sympathizers. After being brought to trial in spring 1862, Greenhow was deported to Richmond, where cheering crowds greeted her.

That summer Jefferson Davis sent her to Europe as a courier. She stayed there collecting diplomatic intelligence and writing her memoirs until recalled in 1864, apparently bearing dispatches urgent to the Confederacy. Sailing on the British blockade runner Condor, she reached the mouth of the Cape Fear River just outside Wilmington, N.C., when a Union ship, the USS Niphon, gave chase, forcing the Condor aground on a sandbar early on the morning of October 1, 1864.

Greenhow, fearing capture and re-imprisonment, persuaded the captain to send her and 2 companions ashore in a lifeboat, but the small vessel was capsized by a wave. Greenhow, weighed down with $2,000 worth of gold from her memoir royalties intended for the Confederate treasury, drowned.

The demise of Rose O'Neal Greenhow illustrates the end of all those who cling to "sinking treasures." People throughout the ages seek security and happiness in material wealth, but Jesus warned: "Take heed and beware of covetousness, for one's life does not consist in the abundance of the things he possesses" (Luke 12:15).

The true and eternal Treasure is found in Jesus Christ. He is the ONLY Savior and Giver of eternal life in heaven (John 14:6). And, He will save those who believe in Him (Acts 16:30-31), turn from their sins in repentance (Acts 17:30-31), confess Jesus before men (Romans 10:9-10), and are baptized (immersed) in His name for the forgiveness of sins (Acts 2:38). He will give safe passage to eternal bliss those who continue to cling to Him in trusting obedience.

Stop clinging to "sinking treasures." The REAL treasure is salvation in Jesus Christ, and it can be YOURS if you will trust and obey Him.
