Right, But Wrong (con't from pg. 1)

for sin: the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son. Jesus, and only Jesus, was the perfect sacrifice - sinless and perfectly suited - for the sins of the world (see Hebrews 9:11-14). Only through Him can we find forgiveness for our sins (Ephesians 1:7).

God will forgive those who... believe in Him and His Son (Acts 16:30-31), turn from sin in repentance (Acts 17:30-31), confess Him before men (Romans 10:9-10), and are baptized (immersed) into Christ for the forgiveness of sins (Acts 2:38). When we submit to Him on His terms, we are "created in Christ Jesus to do good works" (Ephesians 2:10). And, as long as we strive to "walk in the light as He is in the light," He will continue to cleanse us from sin (1 John 1:7).

We can be doing a lot of things "right" - doing good to all men - and still be "wrong" in the sight of God.

Why not make things "right" with God by submitting YOUR life to Christ, and then continue to DO what's right and good in His sight?

Right, But Wrong

by David A. Sargent - Mobile, AL

A. C. Dixon once told of an incident that took place in Brooklyn, NY. A detective who had been looking for a local citizen finally tracked him down in a drugstore. As the man began to make his purchase, the officer laid his hand on the citizen's shoulder and said, "You're under arrest; come with me!"

Stunned, the man demanded, "What did I do?"

The detective calmly replied, "You know what you did. You escaped from the Albany penitentiary several years ago. You went west, got married, and then came back here to live. We've been watching for you since you returned."

Quietly the man admitted, "That's true, but I was sure you'd never find me. Before you take me in, could we stop by my house so I can talk to my family?"

The officer agreed. When they got to his home, the man looked at his wife and asked, "Haven't I been a kind husband and a good father? Haven't I worked hard to make a living?"

His wife answered, "Of course you have, but why are you asking me these questions?" Her husband then proceeded to explain what had happened and that he was now under arrest. He apparently had hoped that his record as an exemplary husband and father would impress the officer. Even so, he was still an escaped criminal. Though he was "right" with his family, he was all "wrong" with the state of New York.

Because of our sins, YOU and I are "in the wrong" with God. "For ALL have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). All of the good deeds in the world will not "make up" for our mistakes. It's not that God doesn't acknowledge or appreciate good works; He wants us to do good (Ephesians 2:10). But the truth is... there is only One remedy

She Shall Be Praised

by Jeril (Polly) Cline

"All right, I'm home. Now what?"

Let's look at the ideal manager of the home, the woman in Proverbs 31. Open your Bible and circle the verbs, for those action words reveal the inner and outer person: she does, looks for, works with, brings, rises, gives, considers, buys, plants, girds, makes, senses, stretches, grasps, extends, is not afraid, sews, supplies, smiles, shares, teaches. Here is a productive, purposeful, content woman. She is busy with a variety of endeavors, all of which have to do with the management of her home, and which are done from her home base.

Her relationship with her husband is mentioned first and last, verses 11 and 28. Their mutual love, trust, and honor are primary to the success of their home. The husband is secure in his wife's ability to manage their resources. He knows that his own character is protected by her, in word ("in her tongue is the law of kindness") and deed ("she does him good all the days of her life"). She is the guardian of his weaknesses, and he guards hers. Because of the confidence each has in the other, they are able to do their work well, each fulfilling his/her God-given role.

From early morning till evening (Verses 15 and 18) her time is spent diligently caring for those in her household, as well as those less fortunate, the poor and needy (verse 20). There is no time for gossip, television soap operas, or feeling sorry for herself. She is creative with what she has been given, and like the two talent person in Matthew 25:22, she has taken what God has entrusted to her and gained more.

It is not surprising that the Lord is revered by her, verse 30. He has established her priorities. This is why she is able to reach her maximum capacity for good. He is blessing her labors. As surely as Potiphar saw that God was blessing Joseph's management of his household (Genesis 39:1-5), those who know this woman and her husband realize that God is blessing their home.

Not incidentally, her children honor her. They see her worth and understand the values she has lived out before them. Hard work, a sense of gain, the joy of life...all these make for a wonderful mother—a mother who does not feel like she is being stifled, a mother who does not resent her children, a mother who does not feel unfulfilled because she is "only a homemaker." This woman is not caught up in the way the world measures success. She is not self-deceived. She is not vain about her charms. She is happy to be what God meant for her to be. She finds fulfillment in the place God intended her to find it.

Can I learn from her? Must I do all she did? Yes and No.

I need to pray about how I view my God-given role. I need to grow in faith to trust that God will help me be the woman He created me to be, with what I have, where I am today.

God never expects more than I am capable of doing, (2 Corinthians 8:12). But He does expect me to trust Him for the power to live and do that which He has asked. No soldier serves at his own expense, (1 Corinthians 9:7). What God asks of me He will empower me to do, (2 Corinthians 4:7). And in the way of God, the very things we want come not so often as we think they do, but by a route that requires faith/trust in Him. To try to achieve it by any means other than His eventually underscores the great distance between our answers and His, between failure and success.

The woman who is learning to live like this shall be praised (Proverbs 31:30), by God and man. - via The Voice of Truth International
